

KIM FENSTERMAN '86

Kim Fensterman graduated from Ed-Co in the class of 1986 but she never quite left the area of education. After high school, Kim attended and graduated from Kirkwood Community College, then Mount Mercy Community College, and is currently obtaining her Masters in Higher Education Administration from Upper Iowa University. Today, Kim resides in Cedar Rapids, Iowa and is the program manager/academic advisor at Kirkwood Community College. When asked what her favorite part about Ed-Co is she replied with, "The size of the school offered me more of an opportunity to learn. I had several teachers that I always respected and these teachers taught me a lot of what an individual's potential could be. I would say being a student athlete in high school was my ultimate passion, participating in softball, golf and as manager of the wrestling and basketball teams. I also participated in band and was a co-editor of the annual yearbook. There are so many memories, however my most fond memories are on the golf course and softball field." Meanwhile, Kim's advice to current high school students is, "Focus on being a better you, not a better them. Consider your strengths and weaknesses and focus on what you are good at. Before you decide if a career or post-high school education is a fit for you, you should research the different types of career options and/or educational options that are available for you."
