Zac Kuehl
Written by Addy Kirby

Zac Kuehl graduated in the class of 2015. After high school Zac attended college but later decided it was not for him. He is a Senior Associate/Customer Support at DXC Technology. Zac currently resides in Minneapolis, Minnesota. When asked how he got where he is today he replied, "I worked a few jobs. Trial and error. I truly did not know what I wanted to do, still don't, and do not know that I ever will. I myself have changed and will continue to change. It's about what works now and how this fits long-term. I found a job in finance working with investments. I never thought that I would ever be interested in this field. I hated math all throughout school. Now I am finding different opportunities where I can advance my education and career path. But yet I still want to be a nurse. Who knows, I just might enroll in nursing school." Zac's advice to current high school graduates is, "You do not have to have it figured out right now. You don't need the entire life plan filled out. Do not be afraid to take a gap year or two to work on yourself as a person. Be brave and be bold, mind you 'it's not the critic who counts, the credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena.'" Zac is still working to find his passion, striving for his goals daily. Once a Viking, always a Viking!
